Scope of Present Duties:

Some of my current duties include: implementing physical protection upgrades at facilities using or storing radioactive sources; I represent the Office of Nuclear Security on the Code of Conduct; I have led missions and work related to sustainability efforts and I am acting as the liaison between the Office of Nuclear Security and Nuclear Energy regarding security issues for countries considering new nuclear power programs. I also work on and lead several physical protection related training activities each year.

Most Relevant Past Experience:

Prior to working at the IAEA, I served as a Regional Country Officer for the Global Threat Reduction Initiative (GTRI) at the US Department of Energy. My role was to oversee the implementation of physical protection assistance to the countries in my region by teams of US experts. Initially I worked on securing vulnerable radioactive sources and Radioisotopic Thermoelectric Generators (RTGs) in the Russian Federation. Later, I led project teams for Eastern Europe and Africa.

Educational Background:
